FORT CLARK LETTER.

Some Promotions and New Appointments.

Fort Clark, Nov. 6.—The following promotions went into effect in D company this week:

Corporal Fred Lamb, to be sergeant, Corporal Robert Haywood to be quartermaster sergeant, Privates John Traylor, Antonio Frank and Ethel Shields, to be corporals.

These appointments and promotions will go into effect as soon as Colonel Smyth returns from Eagle Pass, where he is holding an investigation into the actions of some of the commissioned officers of the Third.

Another promotion not mentioned in my last letter is that of Private August Heyl to company trumpeter. Heyl has only been practicing about six weeks, but he is now able to sound nearly all of the numerous calls and Chief Trumpeter Watson says he will soon be the best "wind-jammer" of the twenty-four.

Speaking of the appointment of Bob Haywood as quartermaster sergeant vice George Russell discharged, it is pertinent to remark that during Russell's administration the quartermaster's office D company felt better than ever before in their brief but exceedingly checked career, and under Haywood's administration the good work goes on.

As a sample of our daily "chuck" today's dinner is a fair one. The menu consisted of oyster stew, roast beef, turnips, bread and coffee. As far as eating is concerned for once, if never again, D company has no kick coming. The kitchen is a model culinary establishment, fitted up with every convenience and is presided over by jolly Moise Andrews, ably assisted by Privates B. Williams, Ruhl and Ramsey.

Our sleeping quarters are as good as could be expected. Each man has a shelf for his clothes, a wire spring cot, blanket, mattress, and pillow. The dormitory, or barracks, as the sleeping apartment is called, is heated by large stoves and liberally supplied with writing tables and chairs.

A FAMINE IN CAMP.
The following notice was posted up in the quarters of D company yesterday by some wag whose supply of the weed had evidently been at low ebb for some time:

"There is a regular tobacco famine raging in the ranks of company D. The reason of this is that we are all a lot of orphans and need the assistance of all charitable persons. Small favors thoughtfully received, etc."

W. L. Jennings charitably doctored 10 cents—which he borrowed from a Mexican "dulceto" vendor—and, for a time at least, the impending catastrophe was averted.

RUMORS AND "RUBBERS."
Among the rumors which drift over to the barracks from that universal source of information and misinformation—headquarters—are

Rumor has it that the Third will leave here before the 15th of November for San Francisco, thence to either Manila or Honolulu, probably the latter.

Another rumor says we are to be taken to some point near the center of the state and spend the winter there—surrendering our comfortable barracks here to the Sixth regular infantry. This would be in accordance with the war department's usual plan. Their motto seems to be, as in the case of the Fourth Texas, "God help us to help the regulars—damn the volunteers, they can take care of themselves."

Among the many "rubbers" which have been started this week was perpetrated yesterday by Chief Trumpeter Watson and his corps of "wind-jammers." It is usual on the day the paymaster is expected to arrive for the trumpeters, when the guard is marched from the parade ground to the guard house, to play a peculiar tune called "pay call." The men soon learn to distinguish the peculiar tones and when they heard them yesterday they danced for glee at the thought of getting the "long green." The men made a run for the corral and inquired of Corral Boss Frank Williams as to whether the ambulances had been ordered out to convey the escort to Spicford to meet the paymaster. When answered in the negative the gang hunted Watson up and only the pleadings of his numerous friends in D company prevented him from being murdered outright. Bob has solemnly promised never to blow pay call again until the proper time.

Former corporal, now Sergeant Fred Lamb, arrived late this evening and the last seen of him he was making a bee line for the abode of his inamorata. The boys are all glad to see Fred back again and one and all unite in congratulating him upon his promotion, which is well earned and fully deserved.

REUBEN.

The Local Kay See Force.

Soon after the Gulf, Beaumont and Kansas City railroad was completed to Buna, Mr. R. K. Carr, a well known newspaper correspondent, spoke of the road in his reports as the K. C., in a letter, while he spelled the name Kay See, and that name has stuck to the road ever since.

As the Kay See railroad was brought into existence by a native of East Texas, I have always watched the road with keen interest. The promoter, Mr. John H. Kirby, should always be held in grateful remembrance by our citizens for this enterprise, for the road was built when the business of the country was paralyzed, and the money expended on the road did much to counterbalance the loss from the lumber interest, and was the means of keeping our city in a fairly prosperous condition. Some people were unkind enough to make light of the road at first, but all have long since learned that it is a great avenue to Beaumont's business, and the road itself has proven a fine investment for its builders.

I believe the remarkable success of the road is largely due to its local managers and their efficient assistants. Railroad men as a rule are faithful workers, but the Kay See force seem to take the same interest as if they owned the road themselves. I have never seen a man more wedded to his wife than W. W. Wilson has been to the Kay See's interest. When Mr. Wilson took charge of the road he seemed to feel that all the responsibility and future success of the road rested entirely upon his shoulders. All the petty annoyances the road had to contend with he took it to heart as though it was a personal matter. He is always so absorbed with business I doubt if he could tell the color of a single house on Calder avenue, although he has traveled the avenue six and eight times a day for some time. I believe there are times when the Kay See weighs so heavily upon his mind that he would walk within ten feet of a boy of pretty young ladies and not see one of them.

W. C. Averill I believe fills the position of treasurer as no other person could. When corn was ground on water mills often in dry weather the water in the mill pond run very low. It was then the miller stopped the leaks and tightened up the mill stones to make the water in the mill pond grind until more rain came to fill the pond. The same wise policy seems to be practiced by the treasurer of the Kay See when the cash runs low. Mr. Averill's presence adds dignity to the force and gives the office an air of distinction. If seen on Washington or Pennsylvania avenues he would be readily taken for a gentleman who belongs in the halls of congress.

F. A. Helbig is the right man in the right place (as the politicians say). When the freight of the country was hauled with ox teams instead of railroads, a good team was something highly prized by men who followed wagoning. The most useful horse in the team was the near wheel horse, and his mate worked next to the fore wheels of the wagon. The best wheel horse was well trained; had a broad back, big neck, and was very strong. This horse's business was to pull back at times and hold the wagon in place, as well as to pull forward. I think the wheel horse of the Kay See is an appropriate name for F. A. Helbig, for he certainly knows when to pull back and when to go forward. As a worker I doubt if his equal could be found in railroad circles.

Whole weeks pass that he does not take time to go to town. But there is not a poor worker in the whole team. There is Leigh Harris, young in years but as steady as a man of 50.

Another prominent factor in the management is G. A. Wansbrough, who though comparatively new on the force has proven himself a railroad man of more than ordinary ability and one who is always seeking to add to the resources of the Kay See. With him is J. W. Hawley, who is a whole team himself when it comes to looking after Kay See interests.

Charles Nelson is a new man in the team, but works as well and takes the same interest as if he had been with the road since its organization.

Joe Stott is adept in his line. He is now very busy making estimates on the cost of the extension of the road.

If the Kay See force were paid according to the work they do they would be the best paid railroad men in the United States. Many people think it hard to work eight and ten hours a day, but it is not uncommon for some of the Kay See men to work sixteen and eighteen. Often at night when Beaumont's mental and physical workers are resting in the arms of Morpheus, there can be seen a light burning brightly in the upper story of the Kay See building, which means the Kay See boys are still hard at work.

I had thought that this indefatigable work would cease when they got the road on a business basis, but there seems to be no let up to their zeal. I am sorry to say they often labor on the Lord's day to keep up their business. I do not believe the Eastern officials would permit this if they knew it.

The Kay See force seem to have an abiding faith in the future of the road. I suppose they think they will be rewarded for their faithfulness when the road gets to be a mighty trunk line, and I firmly believe they will.
